

A preliminary assessment of future uses and carrying capacities.

Summary. During 2005-6 the Park Service made an inspection of all remaining buildings on the peninsula, listing both a suggestion of their adaptive uses--say a quarter of a century from now--and an overnight capacity in numbers of people could be accommodated at "normal full" capacities and a "maximum crowded" capacities. In broad numbers the overnight population (full) ranged from 800 people at a "normal full" capacity to 1100 at a "maximum crowded" capacity.

The following spreadsheets list all remaining historic structures at the park, a suggested adaptive use of each, a listing of the number of bedrooms, and number of occupants each would accommodate. This is a preliminary evaluation and suggested uses can easily be changed from say visitor to employee uses. Occupied patient residences were only evaluated from the outside and/or from the old 1977 Souilliere and Law Building Inventory. Where newer assessment becomes available the database can easily be corrected. The low end number included a 10-site walk-in campground at 5 people/site, and the high end number included one of 30-sites and 6 people/site.

However, this data has a high degree of credibility—buildings listed actually exist, and all that remain are listed herein. This data is the best available both to management now considering sizing of utilities now being undertaken, and would be raw data upon which to base master planning when it becomes politically permissible to begin such undertaking.

The data contains the presumption that Kalaupapa will remain a National Historical Park and that the historic structures remaining will be preserved, and that in the future they will be adaptively used. Ideas, or rumors, occasionally voiced that spacious new hotels will be constructed, or that the Hawaiian Homes Land Commission will withdraw the lease to the National Park Service seem unlikely, but if such were realized the Historic Park would lose its integrity and certainly be terminated as a national park by the Congress.

In the spreadsheets that follow an explanation of the column headings is appended at the end. Clicking your curser on the heading will jump to the column headings legend.

Embedded in the spreadsheet analyses are several options and their outcomes. These are summarized on page 12.
